World Wide Fund for Nature (WWF)

Threatened Species 98.

The third release in the WWF Threatened Species 98 Series is the Glossy Black Cockatoo (Calyptorhynchus lathami halmaturinus).

Found on Kangaroo Island in South Australia the Glossy Black Cockatoo nests in eucalypt hollows on uncleared and partly cleared land.

Feeding almost entirely on casuarina seeds, the bird is dramatically affected when the trees are destroyed by land clearing and bush fires. In addition, the Cockatoo faces increased competition for nesting sites from other birds and insects.

There are four Phonecards in the WWF Threatened Species 98 Series. Each limited edition folder is $29.50. As a special offer you can buy all four folders for only $80 (the face value price).

If you would like to become a member of WWF, send a cheque for $35.00 (payable to WWF Australia) to the Phonecard Collector Service with your completed order form. All new WWF members will receive a WWF calico bag free (retail price $9.95). To become a member, please tick the box on the order form.

NOTICEBOARD

DID YOU KNOW.....

The Looney Tunes Bugs Bunny Smart Phonocard was released under two different product codes. The first issue is 98005029N. This Phonocard was produced for the Easter Show to launch the first joint Telstra and Warner Bros. issue and has Easter 1998 printed on the reverse.

The second print has product code 98005033N and was produced for National distribution throughout 1998 and does not have Easter 1998 printed on the reverse.

The Telstra Smart Phonocard is based on chip card technology made to internationally recognised Eurochip standards. Telstra uses two chip suppliers to produce Phonecards. Incard, an Italian company, was used exclusively up until February 1998 when an American company, Leigh Mardon introduced their chip technology. From March 1998 onward Leigh Mardon chips have been predominant in the production of Telstra Phonecards.

The type of chip used for Telstra Smart Phonecards is a 221 bit EEPROM with counter and security. This chip can be configured with three different kinds of memory. These are:
ROM- Read Only Memory;
PROM- Programmable Read Only Memory and EEPROM- Electronically Erasable Read Only Memory.

The advantage of this chip is that it allows greater flexibility with the memory for future multi-function applications such as vending machines, parking meters and personalised services.

Incard initially produced the "8 contact chip" and when Leigh Mardon chips were introduced a "6 contact chip" was used. There is no difference in the technological capabilities of the 6 and 8 contact chips, however they do look different.
