What should I collect?

HAT should I collect? is the question new telephone card collectors ask most frequently. There are almost as many answers to this question as there are collectors!

It would seem that 'home country' collecting remains the most popular. That is to say, most collectors living in Australia would seem to have a collection of Australian cards while those living in, say, Denmark, would have a collection of Danish cards.

Second in popularity, and rising fast, would be topical or thematic collecting - where the subject or the design of the card is the primary reason for collecting it, rather than the country of issue.

Among the most popular topical cards are Coca-Cola, Disney cartoon characters, general cartoon characters (the Phantom, etc), entertainers (including singers and movie stars), motor sport and so on.

Causing price pressure on the first issues of many countries are those collectors whose chief intent is to obtain the first card or first set of cards of every country.

Meanwhile, many collectors seek out cards from other countries which bear some relationship to their home country. A good example would be an Australian collector adding cards with maps of Australia or kangaroos or koalas on them; or New Zealanders collecting cards showing kiwis, sheep or New Zealand scenery.

An increasingly popular field is the collection of minor varieties and, though they are generally rare, major printing errors on telephone cards. In the 'minor' category, we would rate small 'flyspecks' and hairlines which appear on phonecards suggesting that some kind of foreign matter has come between the substrate (the card plastic) and the printing plate during production.

Major errors would include missing colours, inverted colours, missing serial numbers and other, more spectacular examples of printer's errors. These might include 'mules', where the design meant for the card of one country is printed on a 'blank' of another country.

Obviously, we at Phonecard Collector would be delighted to learn of any such varieties and errors which come to the attention of our Last, but by no means least, there is the collection of prefix numbers. For reference purposes, there are now excellent checklists of Australian card prefixes available. Such reference works are invaluable and those who painstakingly compile such listings are deserving of your support.

The above are some of the most popular phonecard collecting styles. We would like to hear from readers who collect in ways not described

Of all collecting styles, topical collecting is tipped to grow fastest, because of the universal nature of popular themes, especially on advertising cards and especially brands like Coca-Cola.

Whatever your interest, there is bound to be a collecting syle which suits you well. In the unlikely event that you tire of the hobby, given the large number of collectors, your collection is likely to find a buyer.

AUSTRALIA POST has entered into an agreement with Telearch (Aust) Pty Ltd for the reproduction of Australia Post stamp images on Telecom Australia telephone cards. It is understood Telearch intends produce collector's packs containing a stamp and a phonecard bearing common images.

The packs will be available only through Telearch stockists and not through Australia Post.

PACS issues

PACS (Phonecard Advertising Collector Services) has continued its successful issuing programme, with a range of three $5 cards featuring the Sydney Opera House sold in a pack (issue price $70), in conjunction with the Opera House Trust.

The Opera House packs are selling well, according to PACS agents. The packs are also on sale at the Sydney Opera House.

PACS had another runaway success on its hands with a $5 card featuring the famous Ettamogah Pub. An edition of 10,000 cards was made available and these sold out quickly at Ettamogah's own outlets and through the PACS dealer network.

Albury High

AS part of its 75th anniversary celebrations, Albury High School (New South Wales) released a $2 card. The school's principal, Mr Jim Shearing, recently moved to Australia from Britain, where several schools at which he worked used commemorative phonecard issues a a means to raise funds.

The Albury High School cards were very popular in the local community and with collectors, leading to a very fast sell-out of the issue.

Telearch

TELEARCH dealers reported a fast sell-out of their first AFL pack, depicting Gary ('The Mark') Ablett. The recently-released Tony ('Magic') Modra card is also reported to be selling fast. The next two cards in this very popular series depict AFL players, Chris Mainwarring and Stephen Silvagni.

Entertainers

LEGENDARY entertainers, Madonna, Elvis Presley and Marilyn Monroe, will feature on a series of Telecom Australia telephone cards, issued on behalf of Zealand's Strategic New Limited.

TELECOM's long awaited Standing Order arrangement is now in place and available to collectors. Under the service, collectors can elect to future automatically receive all official and Telecom Australia their corporate issues, providing accounts are in credit.

By arrangement with New Zealand Telecom, similar greeting cards have been produced in New Zealand for several years and have proven very popular.

A $5 advertising card will be released in December the fifth anniversary of the first trials of telephone cards in Australia.

Unique heritage

ORFOLK ISLAND is an island of about 3455 hectares in the South Pacific Ocean, 1676 km east-north-east of Sydney and 1100 km north west of New Zealand.

The island has a population of around 2000 people - 46% of the permanent population being of Pitcairn Island descent.

Norfolk Island was occupied from 1788 to 1814 as a convict settlement and again as a second convict settlement from 1825 to 1855. In 1856, 194 settlers from Pitcairn Island were relocated to Norfolk Island, disembarking at their new hone on June 8 ("Bounty Day"). From 1844 to 1855, the island was controlled by Van Diemen's Land authorities.

In 1856, because of the arrival of the Pitcairn settlers, the island was removed from the control of Van Diemen's Land and Norfolk was created a "distinct and separate settlement" by Order in Council of Queen Victoria.

In 1914, by Imperial Order in Council and an Act of the Australian Parliament, Norfolk Island became a territory under the authority of the Commonwealth of Australia. It did not, however, become part of the Commonwealth.

From 1914 to 1979, the island was administered by the Government. In 1979, the island achieved self-government, with the inauguration of the Legislative Assembly.

The Assembly is of nine members who have plenary powers to make laws for the peace, order and good government of Norfolk island.

Some things on Norfolk island have changed little over the years. Many of the islanders preserve their Pitcairn heritage and speak the distinctive traditional language passed down from the Bounty mutineers and their Tahitian wives.

Cows still graze under a commonage system and goods from ships are still brought ashore on lighters, as the Island has no natural harbour.

However, meeting them demands of the tourism industry has meant that a wide range of services and the most modern comforts are now available including Norfolk Telecom foenkaad.

Norfolk Island is proud of its uniqueness and of its close links with Australia and the other countries of the

First Norfolk issue recalls island's colourful history

Norfolk Island will issue its first series of phonecards (foenkaads in the local vernacular) this October.

HE mutiny on the Bounty is legend in the annals of the sea and today the descendants of those mutineers live in one of the most unique communities on the planet — on a speck in the vast Pacific Ocean known as Norfolk Island.

In its first issue of phonecards, early in October 1994, Norfolk Island commemorates its links with the Bounty.

Following the mutiny, Fletcher Christian founded a colony on Pitcairn Island which was so rent with murderous feuds that within a few years all of the founding males had perished except one.

This man, John Adams, converted the survivors to a community described as "the world's most perfect and pious race".

When the community grew to 186 souls, fear of overcrowding led to a search for a new home and in 1856 they moved to Norfolk Island, 6000 kilometres distant.

Each year since, the islanders have celebrated Bounty Day with a reenactment of their landing, a huge, communal picnic and an old fashioned ball.

One of the first issue cards ($20) portrays the visit to the island of the famous Bounty replica.

Another ($10) shows a vintage carriage featured in the annual parade whilst a third ($5) offers a glimpse of this wonderfully scenic island which Captain Cook described as a "paradise" when he discovered it over two centuries ago.

To this day, the islanders speak a unique language — an amalgam of the 18th Century English and Polynesian — and it is this spelling which is used in "foenkaad".

While Norfolk Islanders are infused with old-world charm, they are introducing the latest cardphones for callers wishing to use the public phones to ring outside of Norfolk Island (local calls are free).

Card values are $5, $10 and $20 and the cards may only be used on the Island. Norfolk Foenkaads should have special appeal because

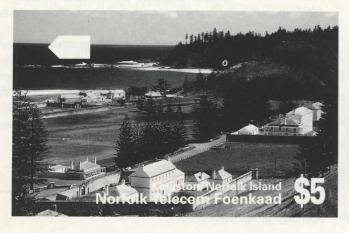

- collectors can begin from card #1;
- designs will generally be based on Norfolk Island's unique history and culture;
- collectors will be advised on all releases via newsletter and phonecard media;
- issues will be limited to a very conservative three or four per year;
- the first release will comprise only 25,000 sets; and
- an upper limit on sales will ensure that all collectors can purchase at reasonable prices.

Future foenkaads will feature more links with the Bounty, possibly including stars who have played Fletcher Christian and Captain Bligh in some of the four major movies which have been made around the celebrated story.

NEW ISSUES

Railways of Australia

New user groups mean new phonecard series.

AYTEL AUSTRALIA has been successful in marketing their range of mobile payphone to new Australian railway applications. Trials are presently under way on a number of passenger trains throughout the Australian continent to test cellular radio coverage and the recently developed PayTel satellite interface.

Use of the satellite interface removes the previous dependence on being within range of a cellular network, and enables many more railway operators to offer on-train payphones as a services to their patrons.

Servicing diverse railway payphones has been made possible by the introduction of PayTel's central networking system in Melbourne during June. This sophisticated computer system (designed and built by PayTel engineers) monitors all PayTel payphones throughout Australia and enables all PayTel phonecards to be used on all PayTel payphones.

The first railway application is on the West Coast Railway in Victoria. Phones are presently being installed on trains servicing this route and a new range of phonecards will be available to railway patrons and collectors on from August 25. These cards will be available in $3, $6 and $10 denominations as single cards and card sets at face value, or in a handsome collector's pack at A$25.

This set forms the first in a series of sets of cards depicting railways throughout Australia fitted with PayTel phones. Each series of railway phonecards will comprise four sets; hence the West Coast Railway is set 1 of series 1.

Each series will be available as a combination "Series Collectors Pack". Only 1500 such packs will be produced for each series, and will be available at the time of release of the fourth set in each series. Each "Series" pack will include all 12 cards of that particular series, together with a specially printed booklet describing the locomotives, trains and railways covered in that series. The first special "Series Pack" is scheduled for release during the first quarter, 1995 and will retail at $150.

As new train services will be coming on-line fairly quickly, PayTel will be producing only two issues per train service each year — the first issue always being released at the commencement of each particular service. A generic "Railways of Australia" card set will be released early in 1995 to service the train phones between each specific train-related issue.

PayTel phonecard face values are always struck to meet the specific needs of each user group. On the (relatively) short-haul West Coast Railway, the client and PayTel agreed that $3, $6 and $10 cards would be appropriate to the needs of that railway's patrons. On longer (overnight or multiday) journeys $5, $10 & $20 cards will probably be appropriate.

Phonecards: a vision for the future

Eddie Cummings, Jr, talks with publisher, Brian Moore, about his vision for the phonecard market.

OT many phonecard dealers collect what they deal in. Eddie Cummings, Jr, 25, is a notable exception.

Heading up the phonecard division at the national capital's best-known collectables dealing company, Edlins of Canberra, Eddie Cummings has a passion for motorbikes. He has three of them and a great many more phonecards showing his favourite means of transport.

"Collecting phonecards by topic holds an attraction for just about everybody," Eddie told Phonecard Collector. "Whatever your interest, be it sport, music, animals, birds, trains or another subject, its bound to have been shown on phonecards.

"Topical collecting possibilities are endless. Animals and transport subjects on cards are among the most popular at the many fairs we attend. Coca-Cola and Disney cards would probably be the most popular of all subjects. And I am competing with a lot of other collectors who also want bikes on cards."

Recently elected president of the Australian Phonecard Dealers Association, Eddie has firm views on the need for a strong trade association to represent the needs of both collectors and the trade.

Because the phonecard industry is still very much in its infancy, it has attracted more than its share of merchants who see only short term gains, as opposed to an industry with a long term future.

"Only major traders with a proven and ethical track record will be admitted to membership of the APTA," Eddie explained.

"The organisation will provide a neutral body for the resolution of disputes that arise between dealers and collectors and will also seek to redress grievances between dealers.

"We want the APDA to give both collectors and dealers confidence in the rapidly growing phonecard market."

The Phonecard Collector asked Eddie if he saw any danger in the rapidly spiraling prices being asked (and obtained) for phonecards.

He mentioned that the price rises are a function of supply and demand, though he did express some surprise at the spped with which some items are increasing in price.

He suggested that there are many 'sleepers' available at still modest prices, including some of the less spectacular packs, mint phonecard sets and one-hole used cards.

The Edlins of Canberra business, owned by Ed Cummings, Snr, and the Cummings family, was founded largely on trade in coins and stamps. That profile has changed considerably in recent years, and while coins and numismatic material remain important parts of the company's business, stamps make up less of the company's turnover.

While Edlins' retail business is conducted from a well-appointed shop in Canberra's busy Garema Arcade, the company has a busy mail order division, attending to the needs of a growing clientelle. Hundreds of collectors and dealers also buy and sell through Edlins' regular postal bid and auction sales.

On pages 11-15 of this issue of Phonecard Collector, Edlins are offering more than 750 lots of phonecards for sale by auction. The sale, part of an even larger offering of stamps, coins and other collectables, will be held in Canberra on September 23. Total estimates exceed $250,000 and the sale is, to Phonecard Collector's knowledge, the largest of its type ever undertaken in the southern hemisphere.

Milestones are not unusual for Edlins. Eddie was one of the pioneers in collecting Australian phonecards by prefix number, publishing the definitive catalogue of prefixes late last year. Though interest in prefixes has waned slightly, given the strong state of the market for phonecard packs, there is still a sound collector base for prefixes. Edlins will publish a new catalogue containing the prefix listing late September.

Eddie concluded that there are many collectors viewing their phonecard purchases solely as a vehicle for making a dollar or two. He suggested that speculation could be a dangerous activity. Collectors should keep their purchases within reason and affordability and not get carried away, plunging in and risking all, he felt. Sound advice indeed!

Courage Under Fire

The heroic work of volunteer Australian firefighters is to be recalled on phonecards.

USTRALIAN PHONECARD COLLECTABLES PTY LTD of Cherrybrook, New South Wales, is the newest company to join the ranks of those using Telecom Australia telephone cards as an advertising and promotional medium.

APC managing director, John de Bree, has over 20 years experience in senior corporate positions with customer service oriented financial services and media companies, such as American Express, Radio Station 2WS and St George Bank.

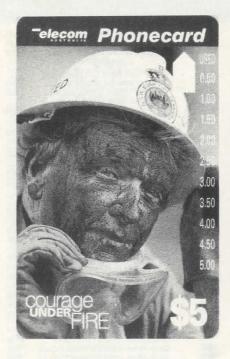

Mr de Bree researched the telephone card market heavily before committing to his first card issue. Over several months, he talked with industry leaders, collectors and Telecom executives in order to identify market needs and expectations.

His research revealed the demand for high quality, value-for-money thematic phonecards in attractive packaging.

Mr de Bree told Phonecard Collector magazine that his company's first issue, a set of two $5 cards, will be available late in September in a special presentation pack, to pay tribute to the work of Australia's volunteer firefighters.

Called "Courage Under Fire," the issue is particularly poignant given the approaching summer bushfire season and the tragic memories of last year's bushfires which engulfed much of Sydney.

The Courage Under Fire phonecard issue has been endorsed by Mr Phil

John de Bree, managing director, Australian Phonecard Collectables Pty Ltd of Cherrybrook, NSW.

Koperberg, Commissioner of the New South Wales Department of Bushfire Services.

Mr Koperberg has been vocal recently in seeking an extension of the gazetted bushfire season in New South Wales, which, among other initiatives, limits the lighting of open fires.

"A percentage of the profits from sale of the Courage Under Fire issue will be devoted to the activities of Bushfire Services in New South Wales," Mr de Bree told Phonecard Collector.

The pack will be produced in a limited, individually numbered edition of only 6000 packs, with a recommended retail price of $39.50 in Australia.

The packs are similar in shape, size and format to Telecom New Zealand packs, featuring a protective sleeve with cards stored in archival quality pockets. The packs can be opened up to view the phonecards in existing phonecard pack albums.

Opals to feature

The "Courage Under Fire" issue is the first in a Nature series of phonecards from APC.

APC's next issue, due for release in November, will feature Australian gemstones and is being coordinated in association with the Australian Gem Industry Association.

A single card will show beautiful Australian opals, and is likely to be the forerunner in a series on what will be a new topic for Australian cards.

In an effort to add value for pack purchasers, APC will offer collectors of the gemstones pack an opportunity to win an opal pendant to the value of $2500 through a competition to be in Phonecard Collector magazine.

APC objectives

Australian Phonecard Collectables objectives are to produce value-formoney, high quality advertising and custom issues, primarily featuring Australian themes, using Telecom phonecards and attractive packaging.

"My aim is to increase the size and scope of the market for phonecards and to promote them as an advertising medium," Mr de Bree told Phonecard Collector.

T would be faster for me to tell you what is wrong in phonecards than what is not, such is the healthy state of the market.

Prices continue to rise at a frightening pace. Still, some areas are being ignored and these will present themselves as profitable opportunities in the not-too-distant future.

Collectors' packs of course continue to lead the charge of the Australian market with South Australia way out in front. The question is, will the South Australia hit $2000 before the year is out?

Next in line is the New South Wales pack, which is trading around $700. This is also a truly difficult pack and soon hit the four figure mark.

For readers on a budget the three cheaper State packs (Western Australia, Northern Territory and Tasmania) are worth a punt. Any significant holdings of these packs are now near exhausted. Many readers may not be aware that many of these packs were broken up and the cards sold out of them in the earlier days of the hobby. The result is even fewer surviving packs intact.

Similarly, used cards from all three states are very difficult to get. The difference in price between these sets either in packs or used one hole or multi-hole will always be close together.

Used cards

Has any reader looked at the difference in price between mint and used cards in the early state issues recently? South Australia, for example, shows a price of around the $200 mark for a one hole set whilst a mint set is worth around four to five times this.

Now, in my opinion, there is no way that a one hole used set from South Australia is five times as common as a mint set. Meanwhile, the multi-hole set is now around $100.

The collector on a budget can build up a collection relatively cheaply. What's more, these used cards also have potential for gains in value.

This same applies to issues such as New South Wales, Victoria, ACT, Olympics and Red Cross.

A careful look through the Market Report and dealer selling lists will reveal a few more as well.

Whilst on the subject of used cards, a few rumblings can be heard as to the prices charged by some dealers for their used cards. It seems that, while the prices charged may be low, so too is the quality of phonecards supplied.

Whilst shopping around is a good idea, collectors should be wary of cards that seem almost too cheap. Check condition before you buy, after all picking up a card cheap may seem to be a bargain, but if the card is damaged, then it is no bargain at all.

Dealers

On the other side of the fence, dealers have a few complaints as well. Some collectors ring around every dealer in the country twice a day (or so it seems) to save themselves a few dollars on whatever. Of course, collectors have every right to do this, but a few collectors, in doing this, end up costing themselves money.

Recently a collector seeking a Dinosaur pack, rang most of the dealers trying to pick up one under $200. In the week it took her to do this, the price increased to $250.

Similarly if you are a collector who continually shops around, you can't expect too much loyalty from the dealers you buy from. I suggest you find a dealer who you can work with and you will find that you save more than a few dollars in the long term and avoid the inconvenience of having to call every dealer under the sun.

Most good dealers happily look after their regular customers.

Victoria sets

By the time you read this, the flood of Victoria sets that hit the market should have been absorbed. Parcels of sets at around $90 each were being shot around the country left and right and centre. What this did, only temporarily, was to make the set look common.

Be under no illusion, though, that once these sets are absorbed, the price will move up quickly again.

Private issues

What a great card the Beagle Brothers' Train was. This attractive card was a great seller in shops and once initial supplies are absorbed, they will be good in the long term.

The Ettamogah Pub issue was even better. This pack sold out in record time and at press time, the retail price has already increased to $50 or so.

My tip, however, is the loose card. This is still available at a lower price and given time, it will be harder to get.

The same can be said for the Swissh card. The pack is now over the $40 mark as well, but once again it is available as a loose card at a cheaper price.

Norfolk Island

This little island with the postcode 2899 has started to take adopt new communications technology, as readers of last month's issue of Phonecard Collector would be aware.

This first set of three cards will be an important one to get. First issues of any country tend always to be popular and collectors will be able to buy them widely at issue price or a small premium, while stocks last. OH

MARKET REPORT

A monthly feature in the Phonecard Collector giving a simple, accurate and up-to-date listing of prices for all Telecom Australia and Pay-Tel Australia phonecards.

RICES quoted are taken from a cross-section of dealers' retail lists and auction results.

However, the report can only be a guide to current prices and market movements after close of copy (around two weeks before publication date) will appear in next month's report.

All Telecom Australia phonecards are priced mint, one-hole and used (multi-hole). All prices are for cards in good condition.

Private advertising and event phonecards are included along with Telecom's generic, national and special issues. Reprints and prefix number are not dealt with separately. Only the cheapest version of each card is listed. Two to three times a year a supplement to the report covering prices for prefix numbers and reprints will be published.

Each month, the Market Report will also feature a short Update based on the broadest market trends.

Update

After the huge price rises shown in the last Market Report, this month's figures show sure and steady progress with almost all Collectors' Packs and scarcer single cards again increasing in price.

As we mentioned last time, individual key cards from the early sets have shown marked price rises and this trend continues, the most notable being: Geelong set: $1.50 Cartoon from $90 to $150; $6 Surf Boat from $90 to $150; South Australia set: $10 Kangaroo Island from $100 to $180; $20 Adelaide City from $300 to $450; Queensland set: $10 Brisbane from $250 to $375; Generic 1990 set:

$10 Logo from $120 to $300; NSW set: $10 Cheetah from $150 to $300; and ACT set: $10 Telecom Tower from $125 to $225.

Other steady price rises are noted for single key cards such as the $5 Geneva (from $275 to $320), the 1992 Christmas $1.50 Bird Choir (from $175 to $250), and the 1992 Australia Day 1992 (from $70 to $125).

The 1993 Australia Day pack is up to $60 and the single card to $35 whilst the $5 Generic pack has been increased to $300.

Once again there are several new issues to add to the Report. As noted in the last Report, the Ballet and Dance Company regular issue cards are now available. These have been joined by the 1994 Commonwealth Games set of three cards.

On the private advertising card front, we see the new PACS card featuring the Ettamogah Pub and the Australian Railway Historical Society card showing the steam locomotive 1210. These will soon be joined by a number of new custom cards.

The Ettamogah Pub issue has attracted gret interest, due no doubt to its excellent, attractive design, and dealer stocks have sold out very quickly. This has led to an immediate price jump from issue price (around $20) to $50 for the pack and $40 of the loose card

Concerning the Rentlo custom cards, we have now seen one of these $2 cards (man wheeling fridge), but not the other, and a full listing will have to wait until both can be included.

We can now confirm that the printing figures of the five different $5 Landscape 1994 cards is only 100,000 of each (in five different prefix numbers each), and accordingly the price for used cards has been adjusted upwards. The Collector Pack has been distributed and a market price of around $140 is already being quoted.

Next month we will welcome Telecom New Zealand phonecard issues to the Market Report with a complete listing accompanied by illustrations and up-to-date market values for the regular New Zealand issues. This was held over due to substantial fluctuations in market price which occurred at press time and would have rendered the report innacurate.

The following month we will feature the New Zealand advertising cards, and these two features will alternate each month in the future.

Next month will also see our regular listing expanded to cover the phonecards produced by Telecom Australia and its overseas telecommunications company, Telstra for use in Cambodia, on Christmas Island and Norfolk Island (the latter due to appear in September this year). The Editors

Prices in Ads

READERS are asked to use their common sense when ordering cards from advertisers in especially where substantial increases in prices have occurred since copy date. Where there is an obvious disparity between the current widely known market price and the listed retail price of an item in an advertisement, readers are advised to confirm the current price. The Editors

Roam's very successful first issue of Telecom Australia phonecards, commemorating the 25th anniversary of the first manned moon landing. The issue was the first in a series recalling the Apollo programme. The next issue commemorates Apollo 15.

Roaming the Pacific with a prepaid telephone card

Roam Australia's Jacob Wolfowicz and Dr Simon Gadir talk telecommunications with publisher, Brian Moore.

ROAM AUSTRALIA PTY LTD subsidiary company, Roam Pacific, recently launched a series of Telecom Australia phoecards in commemoration of the 25th anniversary of the first manned moon landing.

Roam Australia is based in Sydney. Managing director is Jacob Wolfowicz and the other major shareholder and director, Dr Simon Gadir, is an expert in communications, having been vitally involved in the launch of Australia's satellite television licenses and the setting up of Roam Australia.

Moon landing on phonecards

Roam Pacific issued the Telecom Australia custom telephone cards in commemoration of the moon landing anniversary. Mr Wolfowicz and Dr Gadir have succeeded in getting extensive publicity for Roam's operations, including the high profile launch of the moon landing phonecards and the Roam Pacific banner.

The cards were launched in Canberra at the Tidbinbilla satellite tracking station, in the presence of United States Ambassador, Mr Edward J Perkins and National Aeronautics and

THE TELECOM COMPANIES

At a special presentation (from left), Roam's Jacob Wolfowicz presents a commemorative plaque containing the 25th Anniversary Moon Landing cards to NASA representative in Australia, Ted Ankrum, while Telecom's Arthur Bushell looks on.

Space Administration (NASA) representative in Australia, Mr Ted Ankrum.

Mr Wolfowicz, representing Roam Pacific and Mr Arthur Bushell, representing Telecom Australia, presented special commemorative plaques to NASA, which were received by visiting Apollo astronaut, John Young.

Astronaut John Young proudly displays his Roam Pacific plaque featuring the Apollo 11 Moon Landing phonecards. The Tidbinbilla earth satellite tracking station can be seen in the background.

Mr Wolfowicz told Phonecard Collector that there will be further Roam Pacific phonecard issues on the very popular moon landing theme, some using Telecom Australia cards and some using Roam's own calling cards. These will be followed by other card subjects in the near future.

Roam's moon landing telephone cards produced by Telecom Australia are the first non-generic cards the company has issued. Mr Wolfowicz said that the designs on Roam's own prepaid telephone cards would change regularly.

Both Roam Australia directors expressed delight with the success of their first Australian Telecom customised phonecard issue.

"It was something of a fluke," Mr Wolfowicz told Phonecard Collector. "We are first and foremost a provider of long distance telephone calls. But this promotion has helped to get the 'Roam' name international more widely known".

The basis of Roam's operations, is the provision of plastic telephone cards which permit users to make long distance calls competitively, wherever they are in the world, quickly and without surcharges.

Roam calling card users are issued with cards which bear a card number and a personal customised number for security. Users are encouraged to register these details centrally with Roam for security purposes.

Roam cards are currently available in a generic design and may be purchased in cards of 120 call units, 260 call units and 700 call units.

Savings are made depending upon the number of units purchased. Australian prices are 30 cents per unit for 120 units, $27^{1/2}$ cents per unit for 260 units and 25 cents for 700 units.

Already well established in Canada and the United States, Roam is working hard to build up market share through Roam Australia prior to deregulation of the telecommunications market here in 1997.

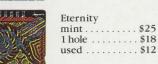

The Roam Pacific moon landing phonecards are available only from dealers, who are invited to contact the company directly for supplies.

Roam Australia's prepaid calling cards may be ordered directly from Roam Australia Pty Ltd's head office in Sydney.

Australia's first Disney phonecards

Donald Duck 'Down Under' at Ayers Rock

TELEPHONE card collecting is probably the fastest growing collector's market in the world and Disney memorabilia has long been among the most popular collectables in the world.

Put the two together and you have what are, perhaps, the most collectable items imaginable — Disney phonecards!

Disney phonecards have already been issued in countries such as Japan and Germany where they command high prices.

In Germany, for example, collector sets were issued at more than 230^{DM} (around $210) and eventually reached 400^{DM} or more.

Recent reports from New Zealand suggest that their recent release of Disney phonecards was an immediate sell-out at more than A$100 the set!

All of which suggest that the release of the first Australian Disney phonecards, due late October/early November this year, will be of great interest to collectors.

The collector set and cards feature "Mickey and Donald Down Under" with two strikingly colourful $2 cards in a beautifully designed A4 wallet.

The images on the cards are extended in the wallet against a Mickey Mouse motif background. Everyone who has seen the initial proofs (pictured on the front cover of this issue of the Phonecard Collector has remarked on how attractive the entire package is.

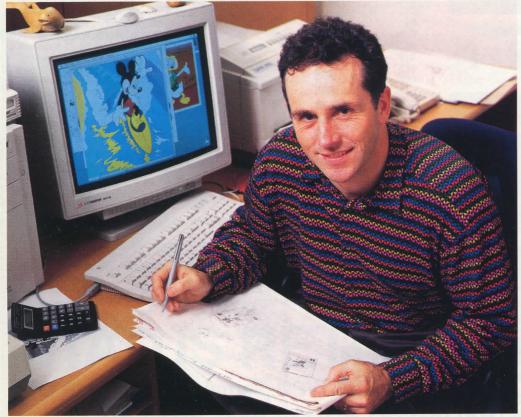

The presentation is akin to a corporate brochure rather than a children's item.

This effect was intended from the outset. The brief was to produce the most impressive, desirable cards imaginable, especially for the historic first Australian Disney issue.

The imaginative pack and cards were designed by a Melbourne designer, Mick Sowry, using a combination of Disney produced images, original hand drawn illustrations and computer generated graphics.

In ordere to achieve the effect and level of quality required, the images were proofed many times before the final result was achieved.

The process was exceptionally time consum-

The Speculator

HE first point to note this month is that every single card we sold last month in expanding our portfolio has continued to climb in price, a sure sign that the market for scarce Australian cards has not yet reached its peak. However, like every successful investor, we must continue to take a profit when there are further opportunities for good investment.

Our strategy has paid off in the sense that the new material purchased with the proceeds of our sales has also gained from the general upward movement of the market, particularly the Collectors packs (South Australia from $800 to $1250, Geelong from $280 to $450, NSW from $400 to $650, etc).

Now this month we are faced with the dilemma that there are still many interesting items to buy, but that our initial funds have been used up in purchasing the current portfolio.

Rather than drawing further on the bank, we have decided to stick by our primary intention of showing what can be achieved with the comparatively small sum of $5000 and accordingly we have decided (rather reluctantly) to sell further portfolio items to make way for new purchases.

While on the subject of selling, we note that a number of collectors and investors who were fortunate enough to purchase material early in the piece and are now showing tidy gains on paper are now considering selling.

If the items represent duplicates in your collection or portfolio and you are using the funds to purchase new items, then we heartily recommend this action, but beware of selling your only copy of scarce items that may turn out to be the 1930 Pennies or £2 Kangaroos of the phonecard scene — these will only increase in price and scarcity, and who knows when you will have the opportunity to buy them back again.

Last month's foray into overseas cards has brought with it mixed short-term success. The New Zealand International Science and Technology Packs have been the spectacular performer as expected with only 1000 issued, whereas the others must be seen as long-term plays. There is no doubt that Australian cards remain our first choice when adding to the Portfolio, but we will continue to look for opportunities from overseas.

New purchases

This month we are focusing on the new Australian Custom card issues which have attracted so much interest. First here is the Ettamogah Pub pack, which is a truely splendid design and has proven very popular. Ten of these have been added to the Portfolio at the issue price of $20 each. Another ten ofthe 1210 Locomotive pack, another great design with enormous thematic appeal, have also been purchased at the issue price of $20 each.

We are continuing our involvement with the PayTel issues, and have also added five of each of the latest packs, the Wilderness Rivers and the Historic Trams, the latter again being a sure winner with thematic collectors. Both these packs are nearing the end of their availability, and this opportunity has been taken to purchase them before the inevitable price-rise that will follow their sell-out.

We will continue adding our full entitlement of five of each of the new Telecom Australia Limited Edition Collectors Packs to the Portfolio; this month sees the appearance of the Landscape 1994 and next month will see inclusion of the Commonwealth Games Limited Edition.

That concludes our purchasing for this month. All in all we are happy with the shape of the Portfolio, having a fair smattering of early issues, a good exposure to the current issues (with their advantage of being available at or near the issue price), and a little look into the overseas markets. If we had more money to spend, then there would certainly be other items appearing in the Portfolio, but then that is a common complaint among investors and collectors alike.

ing and very expensive but everybody involved in the production of the collector set believes the effort was worthwhile.

The proofs suggest that the final product will be stunning — even by the most exacting Disney standards.

It is expected that an exhibition will be staged before Christmas showing all the design stages involved (complete with original illustrations, rejected designs and proofs).

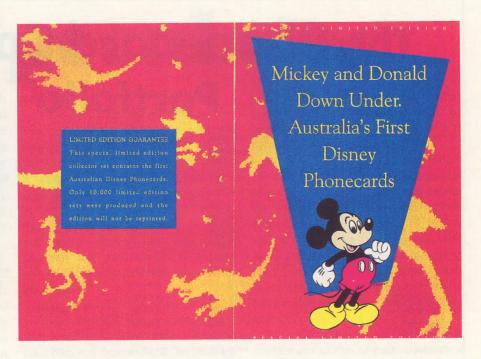

In the meantime, enquiries can be made to Status Retail in Sydney, who are handling distribution and sales of the cards.

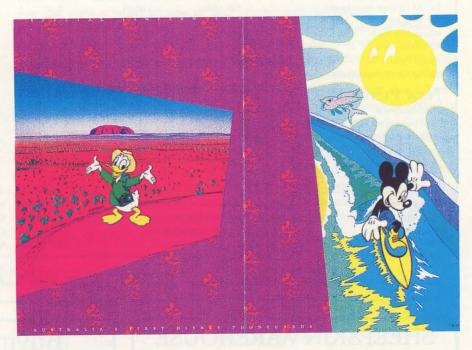

Only 10,000 limited edition collector sets will be made available and no reprints will be made at any time. The issue is expected to be heavily oversubscribed and early enquiries are recommended.

Payphonics

Payphonics, a new Australian telecommunications provider, began installing pay telephones in June 1994, according to managing director, Craig Hamilton.

The company is Australia's first open user group payphone operator and has introduced a range of telephone cards, with both users and collectors in mind.

Mr Hamilton has worked with telephones as a professional engineer for 19 years, beginning in 1975, with work on a design for a vandal-resistant public payphone headset.

During his employment with Telecom, Mr Hamilton was closely involved with the setting up of Telecom Phonecard in Australia.

His company, Payphonics Pty Ltd, was incorporated in August 1993 and is 100% Australian-owned. It seeks to make maximum use of Australian design and development skills and to use quality Australian materials.

Development of Payphonics technology began in earnest in September 1993.

Payphonics seeks to identify niche markets for its services and does not intend to compete with Telecom. Its payphones are connected via Telecom's network and are easily recognisable by their red colour in busy locations, such as shops, sidewalks, clubs and community centres.

CardEx 94

Y the time this issue of Phonecard Collector is in your hands, CardEx 94 will have taken place at Amsterdam, Holland. CardEx was expected to be biggestever international convention and fair devoted to telephone card collecting and included a major one and a half day conference and a two and a half day exhibition.

The event coincided with the presentation of the CardEx Annual Awards, a prestigious international scheme designed to honour achievements in the field of telephone cards. Telecom Australia was expected to garner at least one award at CardEx. (See our full report in the Phonecard of issue Collector magazine).

Over the last decade, the world has witnessed an enormous growth in the use of prepaid telephone cards. With over 170 countries and 500 issuing companies now involved worldwide, the telephone card is not only big business commercially but a highly collectable commodity with well over 2.5 million collectors around the globe.

The one and a half day conference was addressed by representatives of telephone card issuing organisations, card manufacturers, printers, dealers and collectors from as far afield as the USA, Japan, New Zealand, Malaysia, Germany, France, the United Kingdom and the Netherlands.

Topics covered specific business subjects such as market development, card design, issuing policy, collecting and the next generation electronic purse cards.

There were also more technical sessions on issues such as card security and fraud management.

A small closed exhibition was associated with the conference at which those participating could demonstrate their products services to delegates.

Exhibitors in the main exhibition were invited to view this display area at a special reception after the end of the conference.

CardEx 94 was designed to be representative of all aspects of the telephone card industry - not just a forum for card-issuing organisations, or for technical people.

Exhibition space was allocated to card-issuing companies, facturers, dealers, clubs, associations and publications from all over the Telecom Australia issued 10,000 $10 cards to commemorate its participation in the event. Though single cards will be available through Telecom's Collector Service, packs containing the card were available only at Amsterdam.

Fun cards

ELEPHONE card are ideally suited to topical or thematic collecting because of the wide variety of designs and advertising that appears on them. For those unfamiliar with the terms 'topic' or 'thematic', it simply means a collection based upon a particular topic or theme. The collector is free to define whatever topic he or she desires (you can tailor the collection to your particulal interests and pocket.

It can remain a little sideline indulging a whim for fast cars or Disney characters or become a quest to hunt down rare and elusive cards.

For those with an eye to investment, a topical collection can also rewarding: imagine buying Australian $5 Geneva at face value as a new issue to put in your Koala collection (current retail $110).

The first step to starting a thematic collection is chosing a topic. Unless you know exactly what you want to do there is no need to hit upon the exact topic immediately — sometime it takes time acquainting yourself with the cards available, moving the boundaries before you settle upon a theme.

Cards acquired in the meantime can always be sold or swapped later on.

Price can be used too as in the "nothing above $5 bird collection" but make the topic manageable.

A bird collection can be a formidable thing: if you have the fortitude for such a large topic, go for it! Others may finf a collection of 'waterbirds' or even more challenging 'ducks' rewarding.

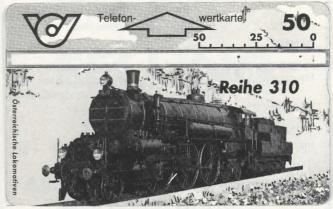

If investment is still your primary goal it may pay to look for topics that are currently neglected but may become very desirable later on.

For example, cards from the USA are being tipped to perform well when the Americans themselves phonecard collecting in a big way: it stands to reason that American-related cards from other countries will then also be desirable.

The hunt for cards then begins with dealers, phonecard fairs, in club exchange books and through swap advertisments in magazines. It know what to look for, you will need to know what is available. Catalogues can be of assistance: for example, European advertising cards have a large range of colourful topics but are rarely seen in the Asia-Pacific region.

Whatever topic you choose and whether you're in it for pleasure or profit, I wish you happy hunting. After all, that's where the fun really lies. TW

Triumphant Golden Girls of Athletics appear on phonecards

HE "Golden Girls of Athletics" who made headlines in Australia during August when they appeared in provocative poses on a fund-raising calendar, will soon appear on telephone cards.

The cards will be issued by Roam Australia Pty Ltd. "When I first had the idea for a calendar, I wanted to show off some young Australians and help attract some more participants to our fabulous sport," said Gold Medalwinning Commonwealth Games athlete, Jane Flemming.

"Thanks to all the girls for taking time out of training to be in it and playing model for a day! Thank you for buying it and helping raise money for athletics. Have fun!"

The calendar is a production of Markson Sparks! It is now in its second print run and was very successful in attracting attention to women's athletics and in helping to raise funds for the development of Junior Athletics in Australia.

Though not all of the athletes pictured on the calendar went to the Commonwealth Games at Victoria, British Columbia, most of those who did won medals for Australia at the Commonwealth Games or other major sporting events.

Introducing the second series of Apollo phonecards from Roam Pacific...

APOLLO 15

Pictured on the $50 phonecard is United States astronaut David Randolph Scott, the seventh person to walk on the Moon. Born San Antonio, Texas, on June 6, 1932, Scott was a graduate of the US Military Academy in 1954. He was selected as an astronaut in 1963 and was pilot of the aborted Gemini 8 mission in March 1966 with Commander Neil Armstrong. In March, 1969, Scott was command-module pilot of Apollo 9, the Earth-orbit test of the complete Apollo spacecraft. As commander of Apollo 15 (July 26 -August 7, 1971), the fourth manned lunar landing, Scott and lunar-module-pilot James Irwin used the first Lunar/Rover vehicle to conduct 6 hours and 33 minutes of extravehicular activity. The Apollo 15 series of phonecards follows on the highly successful first series (25th anniversary of the first manned Moon landing) which sold out quickly and now commands a substantial premium over issue price. For this reason, we recommend you order early for the second issue in this exciting series of six Apollo phonecard sets. Only 3000 complete sets will be issued in lavish, numbered presentation folders, with a recommended retail price of A$215. We are also accepting standing orders for the forthcoming sets in the Roam Pacific Apollo phonecard series at issue price. Order today from Roam distributors:

Courage Under Fire

Dedicated to our firefighting heroes from all over Australia, who courageously fought and won the battle against the raging New South Wales bushfires in the summer of 1994. The first of APC's Nature Series, Courage Under Fire depicts the emotion, courage and drama of our firefighters in graphic form and includes a commentary and endorsement by the Commissioner, Phil Koperberg. A percentage of profits from sale of the Courage Under Fire series will be donated to the NSW Department of Bushfire Services. Only a limited edition of individually numbered packs will be produced and these can be ordered from the following APC Master Dealers:
